

A photograph of a forest floor. In the foreground, several large, fallen birch logs with characteristic white bark and dark horizontal lenticels are scattered across the ground. The ground is covered with a thick layer of vibrant green moss. Interspersed among the logs and moss are various green plants and shrubs, some with small, dark leaves. In the background, a dense forest of tall, thin trees, likely birches, stands against a slightly overcast sky. The overall scene depicts a natural, undisturbed forest environment.
